Modernizing and Transforming 21st Public Health System: Public Health 3.0

Public Health 3.0 builds on the past successes and provides a new focus where public health is no longer defined solely by the public health department and its traditional programs. - Leveraging data and resources to address social, environmental, and economic conditions that affect health and health equity – e.g., examples of communities/organizations using data for decision making; initiatives that address upstream determinates of health; innovative funding models that support public health infrastructure and/or community-level engagement work
- Foundational Public Health Services – e.g., exemplars of public health programs needed in every community for the public health system to work well in protecting people's health; exemplars of knowledge, skill, ability and systems infrastructure necessary to support effective and efficient governmental public health services; exemplars of innovative funding strategies for foundational public health services
